Office Memorandum • UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT

TO : Deputy Director of Training

DATE: 22 October 1959

FROM : Chief, Plans and Policy

SUBJECT: War Planning/Training Support in Preparation for the Post-Hostilities Period

1. Despite the stated requirement for it, we have thus far made only passing mention in our war plans drafts of the training support which may be needed in the closing phase of hostilities in preparation for the immediate, post-hostilities period. During the period of active hostilities it is evident that OTR will be very nearly if not fully committed to training support of current wartime operations; however, sooner or latter there will come a point at which a part of our staff training facility will have to be redirected to provide training or refresher courses for staff employees who will man recon-

2. It is, therefore, suggested that our war plans make basic provisions, in terms of instructor-designees (type) and training material, for resumption on demand of the following types of courses or programs:

a. JOT Program: revised Intelligence Orientation, training in basic intelligence skills, revised Operations Course and CS Orientation and intensive briefing on post-war political, intelligence, and operational problems; liaison ops course

b. Intelligence Reports and Requirements course, geared to immediate post-war needs as currently seen;

c.  Operations, including elements of the CS Liaison Ops Course;

d. Covert Action Operations, including elements of the CS Liaison Ops Course;

e. Operations Familiarization training for support officers and intelligence analysts, security personnel, etc.;

f. Ops Support Course;

g. Admin. Procedures Course.

3. Portions of War plans dealing with the organization and staffing of our training facility should also take into account the post-hostilities period. Aside from curriculum changes, there may be other influences such as, resumption of JOT Program, changes in emphasis of A&E activities, reorientation of covert training, etc. for which provisions should be made in post-hostilities planning.

4. Your approval and comments are requested.
